

Quartering Act

The Quartering Act of 1774 was one of the Coercive Acts. This act applied to all colonies and stated that the British troops could live and eat in colonial homes without the owners' permission.